1918 END OF THE GREAT WAR

The year 1918 was an inflection point in the Twentieth Century. The Great War was ending, empires were collapsing, the Spanish Influenza epidemic was raging, and the world was in turmoil. A century or so later, much is different, but much is the same. We now have the internet and nuclear weapons, but again have a war in Europe and a pandemic. Learn how History really happened, and sometimes repeats itself. Is there something different we could do this time around?

Did you know:

- Eddie Vernon Rickenbacker, the champion race car driver, was the most successful American fighter ace in the Great War.
- The Red Baron was buried with full military honors by his enemies.
- Houdini held classes to advise American soldiers how to escape sinking ships and escape from ropes, handcuffs, and similar restraints, in case of capture by the Germans
- Sergeant Stubby, the most decorated dog in American History, won a purple heart in the Great War.
- Schrodinger's cat did NOT exist—he was a theoretical cat.
